RING OF FIRE, THE NATURE OF RUSSIA

The Kamchatka peninsula is shaped by a chain of active volcanoes, fumeroles and geysers. Further west amongst the strange far eastern forests above Vladivostock prowls the Siberian Tiger. Logging and tracking have reduced the tiger's natural prey, forcing them to attack livestock and dogs from nearby villages.

Filmed by Arvidas Baronas, Richard Kemp, Tony Allen, David Shale and Michael Pitts.
Produced by Petra Regent.

THE MANY MOODS OF MANAS

Manas Tiger Reserve lies half in Assam, India, and half in the independent kingdom of Bhutan, but despite national boundaries, it is run jointly by both countries with great success. As a wildlife area it has everything; tigers, elephants, rhinos, herds of deer and buffalo and spectacular mountain scenery. This is the first film to be made about Manas since it became accessible to foreign visitors.

Filmed by Ashish Chandola & Joanna Van Gruisen
Produced by Colin Willock

FOLLOW THAT TIGER

Tigers, throughout the Far East, are in very short supply. One place in which they do exist in fair numbers is the small lowland region called the Terai, in Nepal. In order that they can continue to live there, it's essential to know each tiger and the amount of territory it needs. This is done by darting the tigers and attaching radios, by close observation on foot and night photography.

Filmed by G.Dieter Plagg
Produced by Mike Price
